

Injured as a teen, Townsend keeps fighting spirit

“Wake up Max,” J.T. Townsend ordered in a polite monotone manner.

The Dell computer screen emerged from hibernation as Max quickly responded and waited for J.T.’s next command.

The Multimedia Max Home System is a voice-activated computer program that allows J.T. to control every electronic component in his sports-decorated bedroom, including lights, appliances, the TV and caller ID for incoming telephone calls.

“I’m still going to use it when I start walking again,” J.T. confessed while showcasing a sly smile. It’s that type of optimism and unwavering faith that makes him such an inspiration. He was both humble and appreciative when sharing the details of his story.

J.T.’s story

J.T. received a scholarship to attend Episcopal High School in 2003. On October 8, 2004, he suffered a spinal cord injury after tackling the running back in a game against Bishop Kenny High School.

As the captain of the football team, he shuffled the responsibilities on both offense and defense as a wide receiver and strong safety, respectively. He vividly recalled the details of the Friday night lights incident.

“I tackled the running back and then I fell to the ground. When I tried to get up, I couldn’t push myself up. The trainers came out and they asked me what was wrong and I just repeated, ‘I can’t get up, I can’t get up.’ Later on, I started to lose my breath and then I just went unconscious.”

J.T. Townsend was injured during a football game in 2004, confining him to a wheelchair. However, he is determined to walk again and become more self-sufficient.

J.T. was quickly transported to Shands Hospital. He woke up hours later, connected to a ventilator and other medical tubes that assisted in keeping him alive.

The doctors told J.T.’s family that he might not live to see another day, but four weeks later he was able to talk, and eight months later he became eligible for Diaphragmatic Pacing System surgery, a device that would allow him to breathe on his own.

While at Episcopal, J.T. received many awards and recognition, including The Episcopal High School Foundation Award for Excellence of Character and the Best Athlete of the Episcopal High School Class of 2005.

J.T.’s football and basketball jerseys were also retired in 2009 at a special ceremony for his contributions on the football and basketball teams.

He is now a senior at the University of North Florida majoring in Sports Management. Before the incident, J.T. had plans to accept a football scholarship to attend Florida State University.

However, he truly understands that everything happens for a reason.

Finding his meaning

J.T. constantly emphasizes that his incident was not an accident. He believes that he was chosen by God to carry out a mission to help others.

as a fundraiser to build the wheelchair accessible home that J.T. and his family currently reside in, motivated him to develop his own platform for giving back.

The J.T. Townsend Foundation was officially established in April 2011 with a mission to better the lives of children and adults with disabilities on the First Coast by providing financial assistance, adaptive equipment, and research funding while fusing the resources, finances and spirit of those with disabilities to take their next first step.

So far, the foundation has collected enough funds to purchase necessary equipment for the following recipients: Luther Delp (Easy Stand Glider), Harold Banks (Forearm Crutches), Nate Cunningham (Rifton Dynamic Stander), Zachary Fellin (Pool Heater) and Jack Hutchinson (Rifton Shower Chair).

J.T. looks ahead

These days, the word “can’t” is no longer a part of J.T.’s vocabulary. He aims to live a normal life by maintaining his independence and participating in regular activities, such as going to the mall and the movies and cheering on his favorite teams at sporting events.

Although J.T. is not yet able to move limbs on his own, he has miraculously regained feeling all over, an advancement that doctors did not expect at this stage in his recovery process. In addition, J.T. attends physical therapy sessions every Friday and is able to be extracted from his wheelchair with the assistance of a Hoyer lift. A magnetic mouth stick also assists him with operating his laptop and cell phone, granting him the privilege of rekindling relationships with old friends on Facebook and sending text messages.

When J.T. graduates from UNF in the fall, he plans to utilize his sports management degree while working behind the scenes and handling everyday operations for a professional football, basketball, or baseball team. He also plans to continue expanding the efforts of his foundation to help as many people as possible.

Sharing his spirit

J.T.’s competitive drive and determination catapults his desire to conquer the hindrance of his condition.

When asked what keeps him going, he responded, “My faith, support from family and friends, and the mentality of not giving up and still believing that one day I will walk again.”

J.T. encourages anyone else who has experienced a similar circumstance to never lose hope.

“Don’t let your disability hold you back from continuing life because life does go on. There are resources out there that will allow you to continue to pursue your career and just live life in general,” he stated.

J.T. was injured in the midst of pursuing what he loved doing since he was 7 years old. If he had the opportunity to reverse the effects of that life-changing

GIVING BACK ONCE AGAIN

Harbour Island Holiday Open House benefits JT Townsend Foundation and the community.

Liltera R. Williams/Special to The Recorder

Lynda and Richard Masulli will hold the second Harbour Island Open House to benefit the JT Townsend Foundation. The open house features a holiday tour of their Harbour Island home, which is decorated with numerous Christmas trees and other holiday items.

The Recorder

Christmas always seems to come early for the Masullis.

Actually — it hardly ever ends.

As avid ornament collectors and tree connoisseurs for the past 17 years, Richard and Lynda Masulli have dedicated a good part of their time to collecting the finest in Christmas decorations. The loving couple relocated from New Jersey to the Ponte Vedra area and began collecting Christopher Radko ornaments in 1995; however, Richard probably had no idea he would become so involved when his wife began requesting the ornaments as gifts from others for her birthday each year. He is now the avid ornament collector, while Lynda focuses on enhancements for the trees and other holiday displays that can be seen throughout their spacious Harbour Island home.

My first tour proved to be an interesting adventure, as the Masullis led me on a magical journey of ornaments galore.

I was first invited into the kitchen for a brief introduction of a 4-foot Wisconsin Balsam tree by Milaegeers that was decorated with Patricia Breen Gingerbread coloration ornaments. The Masullis began collecting Breen ornaments in 2005, and ornaments from this designer appear most frequently along the tour.

The JTTF Christmas Tree Tour began as a result of the Masullis' involvement with the JT Townsend Foundation.

JT attended Episcopal High School with their godson. An incident on the football field caused JT to become confined to a wheelchair. Fred Funk and other members of the community rallied to provide for JT and in Dec. 2006, they presented JT and his family with a wheelchair-accessible home. The Masullis were part of the team that helped outfit the home and fittingly provided a decorated Christmas tree done in JT's favorite FSU colors. When JT formed the JT Townsend Foundation in 2010, in order to give back to the community that had helped him so much, he invited the Masullis to become board members.

"We love JT's contagious spirit, as well as his desire to offer inspiration and hope to others," Lynda said.

This is the second year the event is taking place, and the Foundation hopes to gain even more recognition this time around.

"This event extends way beyond the material act of giving. It's about believing and dedicating yourself to helping others," Lynda said.

Most of the tree ornaments are hand blown and painted in Poland. The collection also includes German pieces, such as the Ino Schaller papier mache candy containers made from the original Schaller family chocolate molds.

The Masullis started decorating in early October to prepare for this year's open house event.

On Nov. 29, JT and the members of the JT Townsend Foundation will hold what has quickly become their largest fundraising event of the year.

Guests will be able to kick off the holidays and enjoy the 27 exquisitely decorated Christmas trees on display. Tickets to the event are $25, and all proceeds will be donated to JTTF. Everyone attending will receive a printed guide as they tour the 9,500-square-foot home, browsing the uniquely decorated Christmas trees, adorned with over 2500 total ornaments.

Volunteers will explain the theme and origin of the individual trees, which range from 2' to 12'. There is a 2' wispy Bee Tree decorated with amber lights that rests in the downstairs powder room and the 7-foot Black Tinsel White House tree next to the theater snack bar upstairs that has the whole collection of annual White House ornaments, started by President Ronald Reagan in 1981.

The 27th tree, affectionately labeled as the JT tree, sits on the piano downstairs and is decorated with exclusive JT Gives Back ornaments, handcrafted and designed in Poland by MIA.

The 2012 ornament is available in either white or red glitter and there are a few of last year's 2011 ornaments with FSU colors available. The JT Give Back ornaments can be purchased on the official JTTF website, at Gregory's Jewelers or the TPC Sawgrass Pro Shop for $50.

The Foundation will also host a gala that same evening, which is scheduled to begin at 7 p.m. Tickets for the gala are on sale now for $100. Guests will be greeted with champagne and light hors d'oeuvres and desserts will also be offered.

Since 2010, The JT Townsend Foundation has helped over 20 children and adults with disabilities. Last year, the event raised over $15,000.

"This is such a beautiful event for sharing and giving back. I'm just glad I have the opportunity to help others," JT said.
